

Rainbow Chard Information Pack

Introduction

Our rainbow chard hails from the same Sussex farm as the Cavolo Nero, a ten-minute drive from Chefs' Farms HQ. Rainbow chard is actually a mix of multiple cultivars of Swiss Chard, hence the range of colours in the stem that produces awesome looking dishes. Chard, a member of the beet family, is one of the oldest cultivated vegetables and has a rich history, cropping up in dishes across Mediterranean cuisine. Our Chard is grown to 'cut and come again' ensuring the leaves are harvested at peak flavour and tenderness before allowing the plant to rejuvenate with another flush of vegetation.

Farm Information

Grown outside in the Sussex soil, the chard takes on a rich mineral flavour and is packed full of vitamins and nutrients, including A, C, K, Magnesium and Iron. Our growers use an integrated pest management system and netting to protect the crop for the ubiquitous hungry pigeons and insects, reducing their reliance on chemical interventions. Additionally, a slow drip irrigation system is deployed to maintain plant health without wasting water.

Every morning, Greg and the team take to the fields to harvest the crop by hand to order. Often, the Chard will be delivered to our customers the very same night. This is a fantastic example of the boundless benefits of sourcing ingredients locally. Simple geographical proximity reduces steps in the supply chain, maintaining freshness, boosting profit for the farmer and reducing the carbon footprint of the product by eliminating the need for multiple days of transport and cold storage. We grow amazing produce in the UK, let's support our farmers.
